

STANFORD FAMILY ADVENTURE

For 20 years, Stanford families have cruised the Mediterranean, seeing ancient monuments and visiting sites that most people learn about only in school. When I went on this program a few years ago, I was inspired by the curiosity and camaraderie of our family travelers, and I could hardly believe just how much fun travel can be. This year we are back yet again to explore the fabled shores of Italy and Greece, this time aboard the luxurious SeaDream II and in the company of all-star faculty leader, Norman Naimark and our creative and zany Young Explorer leaders. This is a voyage not to be missed. Join us!

BRETT S. THOMPSON, '83, DIRECTOR, STANFORD TRAVEL/STUDY

FEATURED SPEAKER

NORMAN NAIMARK, '66, MA '68, PHD '72, former director of Stanford's Bing Overseas Studies and current director of Stanford's Global Studies Division has been traveling and studying the Mediterranean region for 40 years. One of his books, Fires of Hatred: Ethnic Cleansing in 20th Century Europe, addresses issues such as the Greek-Turkish war of 1919–22 and population exchange of 1923. Professor Naimark is widely recognized by students and colleagues for his warmth, wit and dedication to the Stanford community. A veteran faculty leader who has led more than 25 past Travel/Study programs, he and his wife, history professor Katherine Jolluck (with son, Ben, 12), have participated in three previous Mediterranean Family Adventures. The pair will be teaching at the Stanford campus in Florence in the fall of 2017.
